Jennifer Singer, who graduated from Chapel Hill High School and Indiana University, met Lev Kaye on Match.com. Jennifer was Lev's very first date after he joined the online dating site. "When you know, you know!" she jokes.

Lev went to high school in Illinois before attending Grinnell College in Iowa and Harvard Business School. After dating Jennifer for almost two years, he was positive that she was the one for him. On June 29, 2011, he bought a ring, and later that night, as the two sat in a wine bar in Manhattan's Greenwich Village, he knew that he couldn't wait for an elaborate setup to propose. He asked Jennifer to marry him right then and there. The couple tied the knot at the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University. Jennifer's parents, Phil and Ellen Singer of Chapel Hill, were in attendance. "We could not have been happier with our wedding," says Jennifer.

Jennifer and Lev reside in Brooklyn, where Lev is the chief product officer for The Princeton Review and Jennifer works as a freelance web designer. CHM
